Vice-President Markets and Research
Mobius Risk Group

Zane Curry is Vice-President of Markets and Research at Mobius Risk Group. Mobius Risk Group is an independent energy risk advisory firm providing market guidance to producers, consumers, and capital market participants across the North American energy landscape.

At Mobius, Zane's primary role is assisting clients in the implementation of risk management strategies that incorporate both long dated financial instruments, and more near-term applications specific to physical price realizations.

Prior to joining Mobius, Zane spent the better part of a decade at a Houston based natural gas focused hedged fund, and like many of you who grew up in the lone star state he has essentially always been connected to the energy industry in some form.

As the son of a Galveston, TX based crew boat captain, who served the shallow water gulf for decades, Zane developed a healthy respect for the impact energy market cycles can have on businesses, and more importantly their employees.

Zane is also a proud graduate of Rice University.
